

I have had an interest in politics since I was a child and I can remember being fascinated by Labour's Dennis Skinner. Growing up I was on the school council and really enjoyed the challenges it brought.

I joined the Labour Party in April 2016 after being impressed with Jeremy Corbyn's kinder way of politics.

I attended my first Labour party meeting in St Austell a few weeks later, actually an AGM since then I have enjoyed being active within the CLP and have recently to my delight being re-elected as Womens Officer at the last AGM July 2018.

My Hobbies are Walking, running, dogs, art and photography I have my own small business The Crazy Dog Pawtique which is based at home in a converted caravan, where I make and sell gifts for animal lovers.

My interest in the Labour party has grown since I joined and I really believe and hope that I can contribute and make a difference to women within The Labour Party, I believe that my role should not only be in a political one but a personal and supportive one too for women of all ages and all walks of life! I am very interested in supporting the amazing work of the many women's groups and hope that I help to raise awareness in their work
